

Different Types Of Laser Hair Removal And Some Important Concerns

A lot of people are having problems of hair overgrowth in different parts of their bodies. For people who could not stand the overindulgence of hair in their body, they should seriously think about undergoing laser hair removal treatment.

The ultimate good thing about laser hair removal treatment is that you will successfully get rid of the excess hair in your body with minimum discomforts. The treatment usually does not take long and it not even necessary for the patient to stay in the hospital for the treatment. In addition, for most people, the hair does not really come back after the course of laser hair removal treatment.

There are at least four types of laser lights that doctors commonly recommend and use in laser hair removal treatment. Namely The Alexandrite, The ruby, The diode and The ND and LP ND Yag or the Candela Gentle Yag are considered as one of the safest when it comes to laser hair removal.

Technically speaking, laser hair removal treatment works by sending out laser light to the hair follicles and thus destroying the roots of the hair. Dermatologists use just a sufficient amount of laser light to destroy the hair follicles without really harming the surrounding tissues. Once the roots of the hair are being destroyed, the hair usually does not grow again. But in some cases, the hair does grow back again except that the grain of the hair is now finer and would not really look as ugly as it used to be.

In order to find the hair follicles, the dermatologists typically focus on the dark color of the hair to guide them. Consequently, the laser beam is then being targeted on the dark colored portions in the skin of the patient. Since laser hair removal treatment relies very much on the difference between the colors of the skin and the hair of the person, therefore to say not all persons would qualify for this type of hair removal treatment.

People who have very light colored skin and those with very dark colored skin are generally not qualified for this type of treatment. According to dermatologist's explanation, very fair people usually have very fair hair that it is very hard for them to distinguish the skin from the hair follicles.

As for very dark people, the difficulty of identifying the hair form the skin is even more complex. In view of the fact that it is dangerous to just point the laser beam to non-specific directions in the skin, most dermatologists would to a certain extent not perform laser hair removal treatment on very fair and very dark types of skin.

Even though a lot of people in the United States complain about the excessive growth of hair over their bodies, actually only very few people would go to the clinic and ask for a laser hair removal treatment. According to studies, the leading factor that often deters the patient from seeking help about his or her hair growth problem is that he or she is fearful that the treatment will cost him or her a fortune.

Fortunately, the charge of laser hair removal is not really that stiff after all. Yes, no doubt that the cost of laser hair removal in some areas of the country could be higher but the thing is, if you truly want to get rid of those unsightly hairs in the different parts of your body, you just have to pay the price.

The cost of the laser hair removal treatment very much depends on the amount of work that needs to be done. Different people have their own different circumstances so there is a big possibility that the cost of laser hair removal treatment would vary from person to person.

The best way for you to find out how much the treatment could cost you is for you to visit a laser hair removal treatment clinic and request for an assessment of your situation. Need not to be worry because the first visit to the clinic for an assessment is by and large free therefore you do not need to spend any money for the consultation.

When visiting the clinic for an assessment, it would be an excellent idea for you to simply ask the doctor or his/her assistant about the different types of treatment packages that the clinic is offering. Usually, clinics would offer some treatment packages for example those complete hair removal treatment packages where you can visit the clinic as many times as required.

The one good thing about getting the complete package is that you will be able to complete the treatment exclusive of worrying about paying for the extra treatments. On the other hand, if you cannot pay for to get the complete package, you can just go for the pay per visit arrangement.

Regrettably, most insurance companies do not cover the cost of laser hair removal treatment. In view of the fact that laser hair removal treatment is usually treated as cosmetic surgery, you will have to pay the cost of the laser hair removal treatment from your own pockets.
