

Tips on Canvas Painting

Let's face it; it is your first time painting on canvas and you do not know what to do. I bet there are lots of questions in your mind, wondering what you should do. One thing for sure, you do not want your painting to look like a blotch of paint. You also do not want your painting to look like a big mistake. Who wants that? Yes, no one does. So, what should you do? Well, I have a good idea. Why not, you read on and find out more because I can offer you tips on canvas painting.

You have come to the right place if you want to find out more about canvas painting. This article offers you tips you need to know about canvas painting. This article also gives you tips on what you should not do in order to avoid certain mistakes made by most beginners. So, why not you get ahead and start reading. These are the tips that I can provide you with so that you can start canvas painting without a doubt.

The first and most important thing that you should have before you start painting is that; you need to have a canvas. A canvas can be bought from an art shop or even a large bookstore. There are many canvases available but as beginners, suggest that you stick to cotton canvases. However, do look out for cotton canvases that are quite thick. This is important as thin cotton canvases may not be able to support the 'weight' of the many layers of paint. You should also get an easel.

Different type of paint also gives a certain feel to a painter. An acrylic paint differs from water colours and oil paint is also different from acrylic paint. Yes, you get the drift. Most painter, beginners and professionals usually use acrylic paint or oil paint. However, as a beginner, it is simpler and less messy if you use acrylic paint. In order to reduce wastage of paints, you should put the amount that you need on a palette.

The next thing on the list is your brushes and paint. It is advisable for beginners to use acrylic paint rather than oil based paints as they are easier to dry and less complicated to use. You should use a thin brush for small areas and a thicker brush for bigger areas. It is always better to find a good quality brush as you do not want to waste money buying brushes over and over again. A brush that can be considered good quality is a brush made from a horse's tail. However, you may find it difficult to find it and it may be quite costly too.

In order to avoid wasting paint, you should also get a palette. A palette is a painter's board where the colours can usually be mixed. This way you can mix colours easily and also avoid paint wastages. I am sure that sounds simple enough.

So what do you do if there's spillage of paint on your floor? Well, don't forget to get a bottle of turpentine. By wetting your cloth using turpentine, you can easily remove the paint stains on the floor. Trust me, you will create a lot of mess painting your first ever masterpiece.

Now that you are armed with this information, what are you waiting for? Go ahead and let that creative juices flowing. Get a canvas and some paint and start canvas painting. Try canvas painting with your family and friends too! You'll never know if you'll be the next Picasso. Good luck!
