

Private Jets on a Budget

You will often hear high-ranked executives at large companies extol the virtues of renting a private jet. However, this has never come within your scope of reference, because you believe that private jets are astronomically expensive. The truth is, private jets have become much more affordable recently, thanks to a new membership program employed by a few companies in the private jet world. Take a look at this list and determine whether you believe a private jet is right for you:

1. The Premium Comfort and Service that Money Can Buy
2. Fly At Your Own Schedule
3. Augment your Company's Image
- 4 More Bang for your Buck

The Premium Comfort and Service that Money Can Buy

The helpful staff on any private jet is always at your beck and call. Since these people work for a smaller company, they are closer knit, and therefore, usually they are friendlier than the folks who work at major airlines. In addition, you may set the schedule regarding meals, bedtime, etc. You are the boss when you rent a private jet, so all of the workers on the plane do whatever they can to serve you. You enjoy lots of room and ample space to lounge back and simply enjoy the flight. On a private jet, You can entertain yourself with whatever media you like. Music, movies, books, you choose the media. The central theme here is that all of the staff will focus their attention on ensuring that you are having a wonderful and relaxing time.

Fly At Your Own Schedule

Major airlines dictate that a passenger must arrive at the airport at least 2 hours before a domestic flight, and at least 3 hours before an international flight. On top of this, most of these airlines consistently depart late. Not to mention the terrible hassle of security, check-in, and clearance. Sometimes you feel trapped, as if you are in a zoo. The airlines herd people into flights and herd them out. It is a horrible feeling to feel enslaved to some monolithic company.

However, charter airlines guarantee that you may fly at your own schedule. You set the hours, you make the time, and the pilot and flight crew wait for you. It's a much more peaceful and relaxing experience. Also, you can avoid the fracas of security, and you won't feel claustrophobic when you enter the aircraft. In fact, private jets are spacious, beautiful and relaxing. I know this, because I've ridden on one personally!

A Professional Image

When a company charters a flight, that company is showing the world that it is on top of its game. Companies who charter flights project a luxurious image that oozes of financial security. Many people will be drawn to this company. In this way, renting a private jet can be a great marketing tool. If you charter flights for your employees, they will surely appreciate it, and we all know that one of the most important rules in business is to keep your employees happy. In addition, you will enjoy all of the benefits above. It really is worth it. If you want to ruin your reputation as a company, then you will send your passengers on coach. This is a disrespectful and stingy way of treating your employees. It doesn't cost that much more to charter a flight for your employees, and remember, you will be projecting a strong image.

An Economical Decision

While commercial airlines may be cheaper than charter airlines, we need to take a closer look to truly compare the two. First of all, the sheer amount of services that you receive when you rent a private jet far outnumbers the paltry stinginess of the commercial airlines. In addition, you have a wide price range to choose from. You can rent many different types of private jets, and each one has its own price.

Though few, some companies are offering a new package which saves passengers a huge amount of money. These companies offer annual membership plans in which the company pays an annual fee to the charter airline. Once they have paid the fee, they receive huge discounts every single time they fly! In other words, a company could pay the annual membership fee and then fly frequently and save a whole bunch of money. If you look at the prices of renting private jets, they are plummeting.

This is a great time to rent and establish relations with well-known companies. It is well-known that all people, but especially the elite class, conduct business on a personal level. Elite companies treat personal contacts with high respect, and offer them deals. Remember, if you miss out now, it will be very difficult to establish personal contact with these companies. You can save time and money by renting a private jet, so go ahead and investigate it.
